INTRODUCTION

1. This action arises from indictments of and admissions of guilt by members of a cartel to fix the price of dynamic random access memory ("DRAM"). United States Department of Justice officials have called the DRAM price fixing agreement "one of the largest cartels ever discovered." Computers, Printers, and Networking Equipment include DRAM. DRAM stores information temporarily for quick access by a computer, or other product. Consumers purchase DRAM separately or as part of other products. The amount of DRAM in such products is often a key factor in a consumer's purchase decision. DRAM and products with DRAM are purchased by a variety of customers, including individuals, businesses, schools and government entities. The higher the price of DRAM; the lower the quality and quantity of memory incorporated into products offered to these customers for purchase.

JURISDICTION AND VENUE

2. This complaint alleges violations of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §1. It is filed under, and jurisdiction is conferred upon this Court by, sections 4, 4C, 12 and 16 of the Clayton Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 15, 15c, 22 and 26. The Plaintiffs also allege violations of State antitrust, consumer protection and/or unfair competition and related laws, and seek damages, restitution, civil penalties, and/or other equitable relief under those State laws. All claims under federal and state law are based upon a common nucleus of operative facts, and the entire action commenced by this Complaint constitutes a single case that would ordinarily be tried in one judicial 1 proceeding.

2 3. The Court further has jurisdiction over the federal claims under 28 U.S.C. §§
3 1331 and 1337. The Court has jurisdiction over the state law claims under 28 U.S.C. § 1367
4 because those claims are so related to the federal claims that they form part of the same case or 5 controversy.

6 4. Venue is proper in this District under 15 U.S.C. § 22 and 28 U.S.C. § 1391
7 because each of the Defendants resides, transacts business, committed an illegal or tortious act,
8 or is found in this District, within the meaning and scope of 15 U.S.C. § 22, Cal. Bus. & Prof.
9 Code § 1672 and 28 U.S.C. § 1391 (b) and (c), and a substantial part of the events giving rise to 10 the claims arose in this District.

11 5. The activities of the Defendants and their co-conspirators, as described herein, 12 were within the flow of, were intended to, and did have a substantial effect on the foreign and 13 interstate commerce of the United States.

14 DEFINITIONS

15 6. Computer means desktops, laptops (or notebooks), servers, workstations and 16 super computers. The term "Computers" excludes special purposes devices such as PDAs, cell 17 phones, telecommunications devices, set-top boxes, home appliances, game machines, printers, 18 copiers or facsimile machines.

19 7. Dynamic Random Access Memory ("DRAM") means the semiconductor memory
20 chip providing high-speed storage and retrieval of electronic information for electronic devices,
21 such as personal computers and servers around the world. These memory chips are used to store
22 data in a wide variety of computing and other electronic devices while the device is in operation.
23 DRAM includes, but is not limited to DRAM, Synchronous Dynamic Random Access Memory
24 ("SDRAM") and Double Data Rate Dynamic Random Access Memory ("DDR") chips. DDR
25 and SDRAM chips are higher speed, higher performance types of DRAM chips. "Random
26 Access Memory" means that the data, stored in the form of binary digits (or "bits"), 0s and 1s,
27 can be accessed directly from any part of the memory. DRAM is called "dynamic" because it
28 must have its information refreshed, or recharged electronically, every few milliseconds. DRAM

1 as used in Computers consists of individual chips, or discrete industry-standard or proprietary
2 modules which are available in a number of standard memory sizes, e.g. 128, 256 or 512
3 megabytes ("MB"), that incorporates multiple DRAM chips and support circuitry onto a printed 4 circuit.

5 8. "DRAM Containing Products" means Computer, Printer and Networking
6 Equipment as those terms are defined in this complaint.

7 9. "Networking Equipment" means devices that control the transfer of data in 8 computer networks, including routers, switches, repeaters, bridges and firewalls.

9 10. "Printer" means a computer output device used to produce hard copies of 10 documents stored in electronic form and includes laser, inkjet, plotters, dot matrix, dye 11 sublimation and inkless devices.

12 11. "Political Subdivisions" means counties, cities, towns, K-12 school districts,
13 public undergraduate and graduate educational institutions, and other government units, entities,
14 and instrumentalities, that are autonomous or independent from the State itself under the 15 Eleventh Amendment of the Constitution of the United States or otherwise treated as being 16 autonomous from the State itself, as well as all electric, utility, water, sewer, fire, port authority 17 and other special districts and tax-supported institutions that are either autonomous or 18 independent from the State itself under the Eleventh Amendment or otherwise treated as being 19 autonomous from the State itself, where state law permits such to be represented by the Attorney
20 General of a State, all as provided in the applicable state laws of the respective Plaintiff States.

21 12. "State Agencies" means all departments, divisions, boards, councils, committees,
22 institutions, agencies, offices of a State, public undergraduate and graduate educational 23 institutions, and other government units, entities, and instrumentalities, that either constitute an 24 arm of the State for Eleventh Amendment purposes or are not otherwise treated under state law
25 as being autonomous from the State itself, all as provided in the applicable state laws of the 26 respective Plaintiff States.

27
28 THE PARTIES
The Plaintiffs

13. Plaintiffs bring this action by and through their Attorneys General. The persons and entities each Attorney General represents are outlined in each specific count. In general, the Attorneys General may represent one or more of the following: State Agencies, Political Subdivisions, Political Subdivisions as a class representative, natural person consumers as parens patriae, natural person consumers as a class representative and business consumers as parens patriae. Pursuant to Rules 23(a) and 23(b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, certain state Plaintiffs assert a class action as further described below insofar as they represent State Agencies and Political Subdivisions located in their states in a class capacity that were indirect or direct purchasers of DRAM. Regardless of the representative capacities in which the Plaintiff States, by and through their Attorneys General, file this action on behalf of the aforementioned groups pursuant to their state laws, the issues of liability, impact, damages, and defenses are common to all of these groups.

Co-Conspirators

27. Various others, presently unknown to Plaintiffs, participated as co-conspirators with the Defendants in the violations of law alleged in this Complaint and have engaged in conduct and made statements in furtherance thereof.

28. The acts charged in this Complaint have been done by Defendants and their co-conspirators, or were authorized, ordered or done by their respective officers, agents, employees or representatives while actively engaged in the management of each Defendant's business or affairs.

29. Each of the Defendants named herein acted as either the agent, joint venturer of or for the other Defendants with respect to the acts, violations and common course of conduct alleged herein. Each Defendant which is a subsidiary of a foreign parent acts as a United States agent for DRAM made by its parent company.

TRADE AND COMMERCE

30. Throughout the period of time covered by this Complaint, Defendants and their co-conspirators engaged in the business of marketing and selling DRAM throughout the United States.

31. DRAM is the dominant, most common form of memory chip. It is a large-scale integrated circuit with electronic interfaces, physical form factors, and packaging that have been established as industry standards. As such, DRAM is a commodity, with each Defendant's products being easily interchangeable with the products of another company when designing electronic systems making use of DRAM.

32. Worldwide sales of DRAM totaled approximately $14 billion in 2001, and increased to approximately $17 billion in 2003, with the United States accounting for a significant share of worldwide DRAM sales. There were more than $5 billion in DRAM sales annually in the United States in 2003. The top four manufacturers, Micron, Samsung, Hynix and Infineon, controlled approximately 70% of U.S. DRAM sales during the time period of the conspiracy. Mosel Vitelic, Elpida, NEC, and Nanya, were DRAM manufacturers with a

1 substantial portion of the remaining 30% of U.S. DRAM sales.

2
3 THE MARKET FOR DRAM

4 33. DRAM is sold either individually, as a component of a DRAM module, or as a
5 component incorporated into an electronic system, such as a Computer, Printer or Networking
6 Equipment.

7
8 SEPARATE DRAM PURCHASES

9 34. Consumers of all kinds; natural persons, governments and businesses purchase
10 DRAM, usually in the form of modules, for three reasons: 1) to repair a product which has a 11 defective DRAM module; 2) to increase the functionality of an existing DRAM Containing 12 Product such as a Computer; and 3) to build a DRAM Containing Product from scratch.

13 35. All of the Defendants manufacture DRAM modules.

14 36. Such DRAM may be purchased from a Defendant like Micron or another vendor
15 such as CDW (formerly Computer Discount Warehouse), Staples, Office Depot or Office Max or 16 from an Original Equipment Manufacturer ("OEM") like Dell, Hewlett-Packard Company
17 ("HP") or Gateway.

18 37. Over various spans of the period from 1998-2002, from 5 % to 36% of all DRAM
19 used in electronic data processing equipment was purchased separately for those purposes
20 according to Gartner/Dataquest estimates.

21
22 DRAM CONTAINED IN OTHER PRODUCTS

23 38. DRAM is used in DRAM Containing Products to allow fast and efficient use of 24 electronic resources.

25 39. In a Computer, DRAM is used to store data (in the form of documents, 26 spreadsheets or pictures, for example), while the Computer processes that data. These processes 27 could involve editing a document, performing mathematical computation to information on a 28 spread sheet, or resizing or enhancing a picture.

1 40. Each of the functions would take dramatically more time, if accomplishable at all,
2 without DRAM.

3 41. In a Printer, DRAM is used to store the document or other item to be printed. For 4 network printers, i.e., those that have more than one user's computer attached to the Printer,
5 DRAM enables the Printer to store a large number of documents from a variety of sources.

6 42. Printing would be much slower without DRAM and would result in greatly
7 reduced performance of attached Computers.

8 43. In Networking Equipment, DRAM temporarily holds data such as that contained 9 in electronic mail while it is being transferred through the network. Because the amount of 10 traffic on networks has steadily increased due to the convenience of sharing data, such as when a 11 large document or picture is attached to an e-mail, DRAM is essential to the function of 12 Networking Equipment.

13 44. Computers, Printers and Networking Equipment require specific amounts of 14 DRAM for their key functions.

15

COMPUTERS

17 45. All Computers have essential components, which include a microprocessor
18 (central processing unit), a hard drive and DRAM.

19 46. Nearly all Computer advertisements note the amount of DRAM in a particular 20 model.

21 47. For example, in PC World advertisements from 1999 to 2001, Gateway, Compaq, 22 and Dell consistently listed DRAM at the top of the specifications list, generally only behind the 23 processor speed. In the January 2001 edition of PC World, Dell advertised its Dimension L in the 24 following manner: Intel Pentium III Processor at 800MHz, 64MB SDRAM, 20GB (7200 RPM)
25 Ultra ATA HD and other features for $899.

26 48. Models with increased functionality usually have more DRAM. For example, in 27 the January 2001 edition of PC World, Compaq advertised multiple versions of the Presario
28 desktop PC. The base model included only 64MB of DRAM and was advertised as a family PC.

1 Models advertised for power users and music/photo enthusiasts, who require more functionality,
2 included 128MB of DRAM.

3 49. Similarly, in the July 1999 edition of PC World, Dell advertised its Dimension
4 L400c with 32MB of DRAM as a value desktop PC. Adjacentlly, Dell advertised the Dimension
5 XPS T450, its high performance model, which included 64 MB of DRAM.

6 50. Consumers can add DRAM at the time of purchase to most models. For example,
7 in the July 1999 edition of PC World, Compaq provided upgrade offers allowing consumers to 8 upgrade to 128MB of DRAM for $120 or 256MB of DRAM for $300. Similarly, in the June
9 2001 edition of PC World, Dell sold 128MB of DRAM for $60 as an upgrade for desktops
10 containing only 64MB of DRAM. The December 2001 edition contained an offer from Dell for a 11 256MB DRAM upgrade for $80.

12 51. Statewide requirements contracts for Computers may contain terms stating the 13 cost of DRAM upgrades to base-model Computers purchased under those contracts. This allows
14 individual State Agencies to procure Computers adequately configured for their individual needs
15 and budget considerations. An agency purchasing under this type of contract must make a 16 conscious decision regarding the amount of memory supplied versus the price of the upgrade, 17 and determine whether or not to purchase this upgrade.

18 52. Approximately 5-10% of a personal computer's cost is DRAM. In workstations, 19 the cost share of DRAM can be considerably higher.

20 53. Business, natural person, and government consumers all select a desired amount
21 of installed DRAM on Computers because all software installed on such devices requires a 22 certain amount of DRAM for the software to operate properly. When DRAM prices are high, 23 Computer OEMs respond by offering less memory with their base Computer models to 24 consumers. Consumers respond to higher memory prices by trading off better computer 25 performance against higher computer prices.

26 54. Producers of software applications designed to run on computers specify the 27 minimum amounts of DRAM and the suggested amounts of DRAM to successfully run these 28 applications. These specifications are readily available to the end user. They are published in

1 multiple forms often as part of the "system requirements" included on product packaging, Web
2 sites and printed advertising materials.

3 55. Minimum and suggested system requirements for amounts of DRAM begin with 4 the operating system itself. For example, Windows 98 requires a minimum of 16 MB of DRAM,
5 and a suggested amount of 24 to 64 MB of DRAM. Windows ME requires 32 MB of DRAM,
6 with 64 MB or 128 MB providing better performance, Windows 2000 requires a minimum of 7 64MB. Windows XP requires a minimum of 64 MB of DRAM memory, and at least 128MB to 8 run with minimally acceptable performance levels. Reasonable levels of performance are ensured
9 by configuring at least 256MB in the computer. The popular application software Microsoft
10 Office 98 requires a minimum of 8 MB of DRAM to run with Windows 95 or 16 MB of DRAM
11 to run with Windows NT workstation. Purchasers of Computers often use these suggested
12 system requirements, which specify the amount of DRAM necessary for operation, to purchase
13 the amount of DRAM required for their needs.

14 56. As DRAM becomes more expensive, purchasers of Computers can and do reduce 15 the amount of DRAM installed in the Computer to reduce the price of the Computer to stay
16 within their budgets. The consequence of doing so is that consumers will have a machine which 17 performs less capably than a machine with more DRAM.

18 57. Purchasers of Computers may also purchase additional DRAM to keep pace with 19 the rapidity of technological advancement in the Computer industry. Information technology
20 professionals often recommend purchasing as much DRAM in a new Computer as the budget
21 will allow, thus extending the useful lifespan of the Computer and providing increased 22 performance. For example, Kingston, a manufacturer and retailer of memory modules, 23 recommends that a Windows NT workstation used for administration and service should be 24 equipped with between 64 and 256 MB of DRAM, depending on whether the usage is light, 25 medium or heavy. It further recommends that this same machine, when used for engineering and 26 design work, should be equipped with between 96 MB and 1 GB of DRAM, depending on 27 whether the usage is light, medium or heavy. The current market price for DRAM factors into 28 how much DRAM may be purchased.

58. DRAM is even more important in a subset of Computers known as servers.
Servers are computers which connect to other computers to share files, software applications, and other functions like printing.

4 59. Like other Computers, servers contain a central processing unit, a data storage
5 media like a hard drive, and DRAM.

6 60. Because servers are meant to handle functions from multiple computers
7 simultaneously, servers rely heavily on DRAM for this functionality.

8 61. As much as 70% of the cost of a server is attributable to DRAM.

9 62. Increases in the amount of DRAM in a server will increase its functionality.

63. Servers are used in situations where multiple persons connect to the same network. Servers are purchased almost entirely for business or government use.

PRINTERS

14 || 64. Most computers are connected to Printers.

15 65. A Printer may be connected to a single computer or to multiple computers.

16 66. When a computer user prints a document, the document is moved from the 17 computer's DRAM to the Printer's DRAM.

18 67. If the Printer's DRAM has enough memory to hold the entire document, then the 19 computer's DRAM is freed to perform other functions.

68. The amount of DRAM in the Printer thus determines how efficiently a computer and Printer function.

69. While certain inexpensive Printers come only with a set amount of DRAM, other larger, more expensive Printers, especially Printers designed to service more than one computer at a time, can have DRAM added to them either at the factory or subsequently.

25 70. How much DRAM is contained in inexpensive Printers or is standard or added to 26 other Printers is determined by the price of DRAM.

71. In 2000, a color laser jet 8550 from HP was available with 32MB to 128 MB of DRAM from the manufacturer, and was upgradeable to 512 MB of DRAM. A Lexmark Optra

1 series printer in 1999 was available with 4MB to 8MB of DRAM from the manufacturer. These 2 printers could later be upgraded to 64-132 MB of DRAM, depending on the specific model.
3 Other manufacturers have similar base and upgrade specifications.

4 5 NETWORKING EQUIPMENT

6 72. Networking Equipment devices receive data going from one computer or network
7 and send it on to another computer or network.

8 73. In the process of transferring data, Networking Equipment uses DRAM to 9 temporarily store data while the transfer takes place.

10 74. The more DRAM the Networking Equipment has, the more quickly data can 11 move either among computers or among networks.

12 75. DRAM memory used in Networking Equipment is substantial. For example, a 13 2002 Cisco configuration guide shows that its 1751 router, sold as a SOHO/SMB (small or home 14 office/small-medium business) came with 32 Mb of DRAM memory as a base configuration,
15 which could be expanded to 128Mb at the option of the user. The Cisco 7500 series (RSP-16)
16 core router, sold to large organizations, came with 128Mb DRAM as standard, and could be 17 expanded to 1024 Mb of DRAM. Other manufacturers had similar base and expansion
18 specifications for their Networking Equipment.

19 20 OTHER FACTORS AFFECTING CONSUMER DRAM NEEDS

21 76. During the period of the conspiracy, the use of the Internet expanded greatly. In 22 this time period, the Internet came to be used to gather information and to make a variety of 23 transactions from purchasing airplane tickets to trading stock to buying shoes.

24 77. As a consequence, the Web sites consumers used over the Internet added more 25 features, including new graphics, streaming audio and video and the ability to encrypt financial 26 transactions.

27 78. Each of these innovations on Web sites required additional DRAM on the user's 28 computer for the pages to be viewed quickly and easily, and in some cases to work properly.

1 79. States also enhanced their Web sites during the period of the alleged conspiracy,
2 allowing, among many other activities, the renewal of licenses, the downloading of forms, laws
3 and regulations and the payment of taxes.

4 80. Each of these and the many other functions performed on state Web sites required
5 increased DRAM on the states' Computers.

6 81. As DRAM prices rise, the ability of natural persons as users of Web sites and the 7 ability of businesses and government entities, like states, as users and operators of Web sites to 8 access and provide enhanced Web site services are either curtailed or made more expensive.

9 82. A substantial proportion of worldwide DRAM sales occur in California, which is 10 one of the world-wide centers of the computer industry that depends upon DRAM.

11

12 DRAM PURCHASING BY MANUFACTURERS OF DRAM CONTAINING PRODUCTS

13 83. Manufacturers of Computers, Printers and Networking Equipment purchase
14 DRAM either from the Defendants or from wholesale distributors who have purchased DRAM
15 from the Defendants. These manufacturers then sell these DRAM Containing Products to end-
16 users, as well as DRAM itself to end-users (e.g., for upgrades or repairs).

17 84. DRAM memory module-makers purchase DRAM chips from the Defendants in 18 order to manufacture modules with these chips, and then resell DRAM in said memory-modules
19 to manufacturers of Computers, Printers, and Networking Equipment for resale to end-users, to 20 wholesale distributors for resale to end-users, or directly to end-users.

21 85. The largest OEMs of Computers, Printers, and Networking Equipment, purchase
22 the bulk of their DRAM modules directly from the Defendants pursuant to periodic transactions
23 that take place under the terms of negotiated agreements or contracts. Seventy-five to eighty 24 percent of DRAM memory is estimated to be sold in this "contract" market. Large customers 25 such as OEMs negotiate with the Defendants or wholesale distributors for bulk purchases at 26 favorable prices under these contracts.

27 86. Absent the alleged anti-competitive conduct of the Defendants, this contract price
28 generally would have been lower than actually observed. Information on currently negotiated

1 contract prices is collected from both DRAM buyers and sellers, and offered for sale by industry
2 consultants on a weekly or monthly basis (such organizations as Gartner/Dataquest, Semico, De
3 Dios, ICIS/LOR, iSuppli and others track and publish this information).

4 87. OEMs also sometimes purchase memory in a "spot" market (consisting of 5 brokers, distributors, and dealers, other than DRAM manufacturers and their authorized 6 distributors) when their needs exceed the quantities negotiated or available under the terms of 7 agreements to purchase directly from DRAM makers. These purchases are typically on a "spot"
8 basis (i.e., for immediate delivery), and do not represent longer term commitments to deliver 9 product in the future. When OEMs purchase or acquire greater quantities of DRAM than 10 anticipated or needed for equipment production requirements, they will sell their excess
11 inventories into the spot market. If spot prices are substantially below contract prices, OEMs can 12 shift their purchases into the spot market and take advantage of the lower spot market price.

13 88. Thus, contract DRAM prices are integrally linked to the prices available on the 14 spot market for DRAM. Moreover, the spot market price is openly advertised, easy to track, and 15 influences contract price negotiations.

16 89. High spot market prices for DRAM thus enable the Defendants to obtain higher
17 contract prices for DRAM than they would otherwise receive. A DRAM manufacturer knows
18 that a DRAM purchaser has little choice but to agree to pay a higher contract price during periods
19 when DRAM spot market prices are high. Moreover, if contract prices are substantially higher 20 than spot prices for DRAM, this can cause spot prices to rise as well, as OEMs compete with 21 others for what is available in the spot market.

22 90. Between the years 1998 to 2003, the largest OEM's, (Dell, HP, International 23 Business Machines Corp. ("IBM"), Compaq and Gateway) accounted for approximately 60% of 24 the U.S. computer market.

25 91. Between the years 1999 to 2001, five companies; Dell, HP, IBM, Compaq and 26 Sun accounted for more than 75% of the U.S. server market.

27
28 DEFENDANTS' ILLEGAL CONDUCT

1 92. In or around 1998, the Defendant DRAM manufacturers discussed and 2 coordinated the prices that they charged to OEMs, and to their other customers. The 3 manufacturers did not limit this pricing coordination to isolated or occasional conversations. To 4 the contrary, during a roughly four-year period, there were frequent pricing communications
5 among the conspiring manufacturers, exchanges that intensified in the days immediately
6 preceding the dates on which they submitted bids to supply DRAM to the OEMs, their largest 7 and most important customers.

8 93. In June, 2002, the U.S. Department of Justice launched a criminal investigation.
9 Although initially denying any culpability, one of the conspirators, Micron, agreed to cooperate 10 with federal investigators, revealing the details of the conspiracy in exchange for amnesty from 11 federal criminal charges. To date, four manufacturers – Samsung, Hynix, Infineon, and Elpida –
12 and twelve individuals have been charged with, and have pleaded guilty to, criminal price fixing 13 as a result of the investigation, and they have paid fines in excess of $730 million.

14 94. As early as spring of 1998 a Vice President of Hyundai Electronics America, a 15 predecessor of Defendant Hynix, writing to the industry in general, proposed, as a solution to the 16 problem of excess supply, that DRAM makers shut down production for a limited time to 17 stabilize prices. The article stated that “if the plan is to work ... all DRAM makers must play 18 fairly for the overall good of our industry. A rogue player ... can keep the DRAM business on 19 thin ice.” In or around 1998, price-related discussions were conducted by certain Defendants 20 regarding certain OEMs, which involved the exchange of pricing information.

21 95. Beginning in the mid 1990s through 2002, dramatic consolidation occurred
22 among DRAM manufacturers, leading to a 40% reduction in the number of DRAM 23 manufacturers worldwide.

24 96. In 2001, Defendants agreed to reduce supply in order to artificially raise prices.
25 At a meeting among DRAM manufacturers in the fall of 2001, a Mosel Vitelic executive stated
26 that a “basis for understanding had been reached” in which the Defendants were to “trim some 27 production starting in September.” The Mosel Vitelic executive indicated that all DRAM makers 28 would have to agree for the plan to have the desired effect of raising prices.

1 ultimate pricing responsibility.

2 106. During the relevant time period, Mike Sadler had discussions concerning pricing
3 and other competitive strategies with his counterparts at Samsung, Infineon, Hynix, Nanya, 4 Elpida and Mosel Vitelic.

5 107. On separate occasions Sadler discussed directly with the CEOs of Samsung and 6 Infineon the "problem" of oversupply in the DRAM market.

7 108. On November 11, 2004, Micron's CEO, Steve Appleton, admitted that "the 8 DOJ's investigation has revealed evidence of price fixing by Micron employees and its 9 competitors on DRAM sold to certain computer and server manufacturers."

10

11

Samsung

12 109. Samsung Electronics Company and Samsung Semiconductor, Inc., ("Samsung")
13 pled guilty on November 30, 2005, in the Northern District of California to a Criminal 14 Information charging the companies with participating in a conspiracy to suppress and eliminate
15 competition by fixing the prices of DRAM to be sold to OEMs during certain periods of time
16 between April 1, 1999, to about June 15, 2002, in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15
17 USC § 1.

18 110. Samsung admitted during the sentencing hearing that in furtherance of the 19 conspiracy, its officers and employees engaged in discussions and attended meetings with 20 representatives of other DRAM manufacturers. During these discussions and meetings
21 agreements were reached to fix the price of DRAM to be sold to OEMs. Samsung was sentenced 22 to pay a fine of $300 million.

23 111. Samsung's DRAM sales directly affected by the conspiracy in the United States
24 totaled at least $1.2 billion. The conspiracy unlawfully fixed the prices that Dell, HP, Compaq,
25 IBM, Apple and Gateway paid for DRAM.

26 112. During the period of the conspiracy at least 48 Samsung officers and employees,
27 including senior executives with final pricing authority had price-related contacts with employees
28 of Defendant competitors Micron, Elpida, Hynix, Infineon, Toshiba, NEC, Infineon, Hitachi,

1 Mitsubishi, Nanya, and Mosel Vitelic.

2 113. H.J. Kim, President of Samsung Semiconductor, Inc., had discussions with both 3 Mike Sadler, the Micron executive with final pricing authority, and with Steve Appleton, the 4 CEO of Micron.

5 114. Dieter Mackowiak, Senior Vice President of Sales and Marketing at Samsung
6 Semiconductor had discussions on market conditions and pricing trends with Mike Sadler of 7 Micron, Peter Schaefer of Infineon, and Farhad Tabrizi of Hynix.

8 115. The contacts between Samsung officers and employees and their competitors 9 included participating in meetings, conversations and communications to discuss the price of 10 DRAM to be sold to customers and agreeing with their competitors to charge prices of DRAM to 11 their customers at specific levels. These agreements also included issuing price quotes that had 12 been agreed upon and exchanging information on sales in order to monitor and enforce their 13 agreements.

14 116. Samsung officers and employees communicated price-related discussions with 15 competitors to their superiors at Samsung by e-mail, phone or in person.

16 117. Three senior Samsung executives agreed to plead guilty and serve periods of 17 imprisonment for participating in the DRAM price fixing conspiracy.

18

19 Hynix

20 118. Hynix Semiconductor, Inc., pled guilty on May 11, 2005, in the Northern District
21 of California to a Criminal Information charging it with participating in a conspiracy to suppress 22 and eliminate competition by fixing the prices of DRAM to be sold to OEM customers during 23 certain periods of time between April 1, 1999, to about June 15, 2002, in violation of the 24 Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 USC § 1.

25 119. Hynix admitted during the sentencing hearing that, in furtherance of the 26 conspiracy, its officers and employees engaged in discussions and attended meetings with 27 representatives of other DRAM manufacturers. During these discussions and meetings, 28 agreements were reached to fix the price of DRAM to be sold to OEMs. Hynix was sentenced to 1 pay a fine of $185 million.

2 120. Hynix's DRAM sales directly affected by the conspiracy in the United States
3 totaled at least $839 million. The conspiracy unlawfully fixed the prices that Dell, HP, Compaq,
4 IBM, Apple and Gateway paid for DRAM.

5 121. During the period of the conspiracy at least 19 Hynix officers and employees, 6 including senior executives with final pricing authority, had price-related contacts with 7 employees of Defendant competitors Samsung, Micron, Infineon, Toshiba, Elpida, Mosel Vitelic
8 and NEC.

9 122. C.K. Chung, the Director of World Wide Strategic Account Sales for Hynix, had 10 pricing discussions with his counterparts at Samsung both in person and on the phone.

11 123. Gary Swanson, Hynix's Vice President in charge of U.S. memory sales and a 12 member of the Hynix semiconductor America Board of Directors, had price-related contacts with 13 Mike Sadler, Vice President of World Wide sales for Micron.

14 124. The contacts between the 19 Hynix officers and employees and their competitors
15 included participating in meetings, conversations and communications to discuss the price of 16 DRAM to be sold to customers; agreeing with their competitors to charge prices of DRAM at 17 certain levels to be sold to certain customers; issuing price quotes in accordance with the 18 agreements reached; and exchanging information on sales in order to monitor and enforce their 19 agreements.

20 125. Hynix officers and employees communicated price-related discussions with 21 competitors to their superiors at Hynix by e-mail, telephone and in person. During Hynix sales
22 and marketing conference calls, participants discussed the fact that competitive pricing
23 information had been obtained from competitor contacts.

24 126. Four Hynix executives, including C.K. Chung, have agreed to plead guilty and 25 serve jail time for participating in a global conspiracy to fix DRAM prices.

26
27 Infineon

28 127. Infineon Technologies A.G. pled guilty in October 2004 in the Northern District

1 of California to a Criminal Information charging it with participating in a conspiracy to fix the 2 prices of DRAM sold to OEM customers during certain periods of time between July 1, 1999,
3 and June 15, 2002, in violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 USC § 1.

4 128. Infineon admitted during the sentencing hearing that its officers and employees
5 engaged in discussions and attended meetings with representatives of other DRAM
6 manufacturers. During these discussions and meetings, agreements were reached to fix the price
7 of DRAM to be sold to OEMs. Infineon and its co-conspirators reached agreements to both limit
8 the rate of price declines during periods when DRAM prices decreased, and reached agreements
9 on price increases on sales to certain OEMs. Infineon was sentenced to pay a fine of $160
10 million.

11 129. Between July 1, 1999, and June 15, 2002, Infineon sold DRAM to IBM, Compaq,
12 HP, Dell and Gateway. Infineon executives negotiated the prices of DRAM sold to each OEM 13 every two weeks.

14 130. During the time period of the conspiracy at least 12 Infineon officers and 15 employees, including senior executives with final pricing authority, had price-related discussions
16 with counterparts at their competitors including Samsung, Micron, Hynix, Elpida, Nanya, Mosel
17 Vitelic and Toshiba.

18 131. T. Rudd Corwin, Infineon's Vice President for Customer Marketing and Sales for 19 Memory Products in North America, authorized his employees to obtain pricing information
20 from competitors in exchange for Infineon pricing information for DRAM.

21 132. Peter Schaefer was head of marketing, sales and logistics for Infineon memory
22 products between October 2000 and February 2003. In 2001, Schaefer had direct 23 communications with Dieter Mackowiak, Senior Vice President of Sales and Marketing for 24 Samsung, and with Mike Sadler of Micron. During these communications, price increases for 25 certain DRAM products were discussed.

26 133. At the beginning of December 2001, Infineon and other DRAM manufacturers
27 increased prices to OEMs following a series of communications in which Infineon and certain 28 competitors indicated their intention to increase prices.

1 139. During the period of the conspiracy at least 19 Elpida officers and employees had 2 price-related contacts with officers and employees of competitors including Infineon, Toshiba,
3 Hynix, Micron, Samsung, Mitsubishi and Nanya.

4 140. Elpida officers and employees communicated price-related discussions with 5 competitors to their superiors at Elpida by e-mail, telephone and in person.

6 141. One Elpida executive, Dimitrios James ("Jim") Sogas, agreed to plead guilty and 7 has served jail time for participating in the worldwide DRAM price fixing conspiracy.

8
9 Mosel Vitelec, Nanya, NEC, Toshiba, Hitachi and Mitsubishi

10 142. Officers, agents, and employees of Mosel Vitelec, Nanya, NEC, Toshiba, Hitachi,
11 and Mitsubishi had numerous price-related discussions with their counterparts at competitors
12 Samsung, Micron, Hynix, Infineon and Elpida.

13 143. On information and belief, officers, agents, and employees of Mosel Vitelec, 14 Nanya, NEC, Toshiba, Hitachi, and Mitsubishi communicated price-related discussions with 15 competitors through their superiors.

16
17 FRAUDULENT CONCEALMENT

18 144. From approximately 1998 to June of 2002, Defendants effectively, affirmatively,
19 and fraudulently concealed their unlawful combination and conspiracy from Plaintiffs.

20 145. Defendants engaged in a successful, illegal price fixing conspiracy that by its 21 nature was inherently self-concealing.

22 146. Defendants' wrongful conduct was carried out in part through means and methods 23 that were designed and intended to avoid detection, including numerous telephone calls and in 24 person meetings among the conspirators which, in fact, successfully precluded detection.
25 Plaintiffs could not have discovered Defendants' unlawful scheme and conspiracy earlier because 26 of Defendants' effective, affirmative, and fraudulent concealment of their activities.

27 147. Defendants communicated to their United States entities false reasons to explain 28 price increases, such as seasonal ebb and flow and restriction in output, and instructed them to

1 use these false reasons with U.S. customers. Plaintiffs are informed and believe that Defendants
2 communicated said reasons to OEMs who inquired as to the reason for price increases.

3 148. Plaintiffs have exercised due diligence by promptly investigating the facts giving 4 rise to the claims asserted herein upon having reasonable suspicion of the existence of 5 Defendants' conspiracy to the extent permitted by law.

6 7 INJURY

8 149. But for Defendants' anticompetitive acts, Plaintiffs would have been able to 9 purchase DRAM and the DRAM Containing Products of Computers, Printers, and Networking
10 Equipment at lower prices, and would have been able to purchase more capable and higher 11 performance DRAM Containing Products than were actually offered for sale to them.

12 150. As a direct and proximate result of the unlawful conduct alleged above, the 13 Plaintiffs were not able to purchase DRAM and DRAM Containing Products at prices which 14 were determined by free and open competition. Consequently, they have been injured in their 15 business and property in that, inter alia, they have paid more, and continue to pay more, for such 16 products than they would have paid in a free and open competitive market, and were not offered
17 more capable and higher performance products that would have been offered in a free and open 18 competitive market.

19 151. Prices for DRAM are cyclical. As a new DRAM chip is introduced (i.e. one with 20 larger capacity), the chip is generally priced higher than the chip it replaces. Over the lifecycle of 21 the chip its price declines until it is no more expensive than the chip it replaces. OEMs rely on 22 declining chip prices to offer more powerful equipment at lower prices.

23 152. One OEM, Dell Computer Corp., steadily gained market share due to close
24 inventory controls. In 1998, Dell's United States market share was 13.4%. By 2002, it had risen
25 to 27.7%. Dell's inventory control system used just-in-time management of computer
26 components to take advantage of the steady downward trend in component prices. This allowed 27 Dell to gain significant market share by passing this reduction in component prices on to the 28 consumer. This is referred to by some in the industry as "relentless price cutting," which has

1 forced other OEMs to pass on their savings as well or lose market share to Dell.

2 153. Dell's inventory control system is adversely affected by unexpected increases in 3 component costs. Unexpected increases in costs deprive Computer purchasers of pass through 4 savings. When component cost increases prevented Dell from cutting prices, other OEMs
5 likewise did not cut their prices. Purchasers of devices made by OEMs were therefore deprived
6 of price declines in components such as DRAM that they would have otherwise enjoyed due to 7 such component cost increases.

8 154. Computer component prices overall were steadily falling or holding steady for 9 much of the time period from 1998 until 2002, sometimes declining as much as one to two 10 percent per week. The only major components that experienced significant price increases were 11 LCD monitors and DRAM. LCD monitors were not a standard component at that time and were 12 considered an upgrade.

13 155. During the relevant time period, OEMs published the price of memory upgrades
14 for available computer models. Price increases in DRAM caused the price of memory upgrades 15 to increase.

16 156. DRAM price increases caused OEMs to offer less DRAM as a standard feature of 17 their products for a given price than they would have otherwise. Since purchasers of DRAM
18 Containing Products paid the same price for a device with less memory than they otherwise 19 would, they effectively paid more than they should have.

20 157. Moreover, purchasers needed DRAM upgrades to meet suggested system
21 requirements, depending upon the intended level of usage of the device. Such purchasers paid
22 the full price increase in DRAM as passed through the price of an upgrade.

23 158. The Defendants' actions resulted in purchasers of DRAM and DRAM Containing 24 Products paying higher prices for DRAM Containing devices or in buying products with less 25 performance than they would have preferred.

26 159. Numerous businesses, government entities, and natural persons in each of the 27 Plaintiff States all faced increased costs as a direct result of Defendants' cartel to increase the 28 price of DRAM.

161. The Plaintiff States of California, Florida, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and Wisconsin (hereinafter "Assignment Clause States") require, in most instances, contractors who sell products or services to them to assign claims those contractors have against others for violation of federal and/or state antitrust laws to either the state or to the state agency or Political Subdivision purchasing the products or services.

16 "The Contractor and the Commonwealth recognize that in actual economic practice, 17 overcharges by the Contractor's suppliers resulting from violations of state or federal 18 antitrust laws are in fact borne by the Commonwealth. As part of the consideration for the 19 award of the Purchase Order, and intending to be legally bound, the Contractor assigns to 20 the Commonwealth all right, title and interest in and to any claims the Contractor now has, 21 or may acquire, under state or federal antitrust laws relating to the item(s) which are the 22 subject of the Contract."

164. The DRAM Resellers paid higher-than-competitive prices for DRAM and DRAM Containing Products as result of the Defendants' unlawful conduct.

1 165. In the Plaintiff States of California, Florida, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and 2 Wisconsin (hereinafter "Assignment Clause States"), State Agencies and Political Subdivisions
3 bought DRAM or DRAM Containing Products from DRAM Resellers pursuant to bid
4 documents, contracts and/or purchasing agreements. These bid documents, contracts and/or 5 purchasing agreements contained clauses that assigned to the State, State Agency or Political 6 Subdivision (hereinafter "Assignees") all of the DRAM Resellers' antitrust claims under state
7 and federal laws relating to the DRAM or DRAM Containing Products that the DRAM Resellers
8 had purchased and then resold to the State Agencies and Political Subdivisions.

9 Assignment of Direct Claims

10 166. In each of the Assignment Clause States, the assignment clauses assigned to the 11 Assignees the "direct purchaser" antitrust claims of DRAM Resellers that had purchased DRAM
12 directly from the Defendants.

13 167. The direct purchaser antitrust claims assigned to the Assignees in the Assignment 14 Clause States retain their original character as direct purchaser claims. With the assignment of 15 these direct purchaser claims from DRAM Resellers, the Assignees received all right, title and 16 interest that the DRAM Resellers had in those claims against the Defendants.

17 Assignment of Indirect Claims

18 168. In the Assignment Clause States of California and Wisconsin, applicable state law 19 allows for recovery of antitrust damages by "indirect purchasers." Thus, in California and 20 Wisconsin, because the assignment clauses assigned antitrust claims under both federal and state 21 law, the assignment clauses assigned not only "direct purchaser" claims, but also the "indirect
22 purchaser" claims of DRAM Resellers that had purchased DRAM or DRAM Containing Product
23 from other DRAM Resellers.

24 169. As an example, in California, an assignment clause in a contract document
25 relating to the purchase of DRAM Containing Products read in part as follows:

26 In submitting a bid to a public purchasing body, the bidder offers and agrees that if the bid is 27 accepted, it will assign to the purchasing body all rights, title, and interest in and to all 28 causes of action it may have under Section 4 of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. Sec. 15) or

1 under the Cartwright Act (Chapter 2 (commencing with Section 16700) of Part 2 of 2 Division 7 of the Business and Professions Code), arising from purchases of goods,
3 materials, or services by the bidder for sale to the purchasing body pursuant to the bid.

4 170. The effect of this assignment clause was to transfer the bidding DRAM Reseller's
5 causes of action against the Defendants under federal antitrust laws (direct purchaser claims) and 6 the California Cartwright Act (direct and indirect purchaser claims).

7 8 UNJUST ENRICHMENT

9 171. Defendants' financial benefits resulting from their unlawful and inequitable
10 conduct are economically traceable to overpayments for DRAM and DRAM Containing Products
11 by Plaintiffs.

12 172. Plaintiffs have conferred upon Defendants an economic benefit, in the nature of 13 anti-competitive profits resulting from unlawful overcharges and monopoly profits, to the 14 economic detriment of the States and consumers.

15 173. The economic benefit of overcharges and unlawful monopoly profits derived by 16 Defendants through charging artificially inflated prices for DRAM is a direct and proximate
17 result of Defendants' unlawful practices.

18 174. It would be inequitable and unjust for Defendants to be permitted to retain any of 19 the unlawful proceeds resulting from their fraudulent, illegal, and inequitable conduct.

20 21 CLASS ACTION ALLEGATIONS

22 175. Plaintiff states of California and New Mexico bring this action pursuant to Rules
23 23(a) and 23(b)(3) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, on behalf of the following Class
24 pursuant to state and federal laws governing representation by Attorneys General: a Class of 25 State Agencies and Political Subdivisions, excluding federal government entities, in California
26 and New Mexico that purchased DRAM directly or indirectly from approximately 1998 to 27 December of 2002, to the extent that the entities in said classes are not covered by either the 28 Attorneys General acting in their parens patriae capacities or their proprietary/sovereign

1 capacities and to the extent that a given state law permits such a class. This Class suffered 2 damages that, with trebling provisions applicable pursuant to the relevant state laws, amount to 3 $5 million or more.

4 176. Plaintiff States who are members of the above-described Class and other class
5 representatives such as the City and County of San Francisco, County of Santa Clara, Los 6 Angeles Unified School District, and County of Sandoval, New Mexico, may sue on behalf of the 7 Class because:

8 a. This Class is so numerous that joinder of all members is impracticable. The class of 9 State Agencies and Political Subdivisions numbers in the thousands in Plaintiff
10 States such as California. The exact number and identities of members in this 11 Class are currently unknown to Plaintiff States.

12 b. Questions of law and fact are common to the Class, including but not limited to the 13 following:

14 (i) whether Defendants have conspired to fix, raise, stabilize or maintain the 15 prices of DRAM;

16 (ii) whether Defendants' conduct caused injury to the business or property of 17 Plaintiffs and the members of the Class;

18 (iii) the operative time period of Defendants' conspiracy and the effects 19 therefrom;

20 (iv) the amount of aggregate damages suffered by the Class as a whole;

21 (v) whether the Class suffered antitrust injury;

22 (vi) whether Defendants were unjustly enriched to the detriment of the Class
23 entitling Plaintiff States and the Class to disgorgement of all monies 24 resulting therefrom; and

25 (vii) whether the Class is entitled to restitution and/or disgorgement, in addition 26 to or as a substitute for damages, under applicable state laws.

27 c. Plaintiff States and their class representatives' claims are typical of the Class
28 because Plaintiff States and all members of the Class were injured, and may

- 1 continue to be injured, in the same manner by Defendants' unlawful, anti-
 2 competitive and inequitable methods, acts and practices, i.e., they have paid
 3 artificially high prices for DRAM and DRAM Containing Products and may be 4 forced to do so in the future. The defenses would involve common issues with 5 respect to the Plaintiff States and their class representatives and each class member.
- 6 d. Plaintiff States and their class representatives will fully and adequately protect the 7 interest of all members of the Class. Plaintiff States' counsel are experienced in 8 antitrust litigation, including class action litigation. Plaintiff States have no
 9 interests that are adverse to or in conflict with those of the Class.
- 10 e. The questions of law and fact common to the members of the Class predominate 11 over any questions that may affect only individual members.
- 12 f. For those Plaintiff States and class representatives bringing this as a class action, a 13 class action is equivalent or superior to other available methods for the fair and 14 efficient adjudication of this controversy. Joinder of all state agency and political 15 subdivision purchasers of DRAM and DRAM Containing Products would be 16 impracticable. The Class is readily definable and prosecution as a class action will 17 eliminate the possibility of duplicative litigation, while also providing redress for 18 claims that would otherwise be too small to support the expense of individual 19 complex litigation.

20 21 VIOLATIONS ALLEGED

22 First Claim for Relief

23 (Violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act)

24 (Count One – All Plaintiff States - Injunction)

25 177. Plaintiffs incorporate and reallege, as though fully set forth herein, each and every 26 allegation set forth in the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint.

27 178. Beginning at least on or around 1998 and continuing through at least June 30,
 28 2002, the exact dates being unknown to Plaintiffs, Defendants and their co-conspirators entered

1 into a continuing agreement, understanding, and conspiracy in restraint of trade to artificially
2 raise, fix, maintain, and/or stabilize prices for DRAM in the United States, in violation of Section
3 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § 1.

4 179. In formulating and carrying out the alleged agreement, understanding, and 5 conspiracy, the Defendants and their co-conspirators did those things that they combined and 6 conspired to do, including but not limited to the acts, practices, and course of conduct set forth
7 above, and the following, among others:

25 having paid more for DRAM purchased directly and indirectly from the Defendants and their co-26 conspirators than they would have paid and will pay in the absence of the combination and 27 conspiracy. This includes paying more for DRAM Containing Products as a result of higher 28 prices paid for DRAM by the OEMs of those products, and by the potential future deprivation of

1 competition arising from the failure of Defendants to discontinue the wrongful conduct until 2 Federal Grand Jury Subpoenas were issued, and from the repeated attempts of Defendants to 3 further stabilize the aforementioned price fixing conspiracy by limiting or curtailing supply or 4 market share.

5 182. As a result of each of the illegal contracts, combinations, and conspiracies alleged 6 above, consumers in the States represented by Plaintiffs have sustained injury to their property
7 and will continue to be injured in their property by having paid more for DRAM purchased
8 directly and indirectly from the Defendants and their co-conspirators than they would have paid
9 and will pay in the absence of the combination and conspiracy. This includes paying more for

13 and from the repeated attempts of Defendants to further stabilize the aforementioned price fixing 14 conspiracy by limiting or curtailing supply or market share.

16 restraining the violations alleged herein, as well as enjoining the Defendants from engaging in 17 similar conduct in the future.

as Direct Purchasers by Assignment Against Defendants)

20 184. Plaintiffs incorporate and reallege, as though fully set forth herein, each and every 21 allegation set forth in the preceding paragraphs of this Complaint.

26 above, including the right to recover damages flowing from Defendants' unlawful conduct.

27 186. Customers for DRAM and DRAM Containing Products from DRAM Resellers
28 included State Agencies and/or Political Subdivisions in the States of California, Florida, 17 , Utah, Washington, and Wisconsin (hereinafter referred to as “Direct Purchasing States”).

18 191. Customers of Micron who purchased DRAM in these Direct Purchasing States
19 paid artificially inflated prices for DRAM because Micron participated in a conspiracy to fix
20 prices for DRAM in violation of Section 1 of the Sherman Act. 15 U.S.C. §1. As a direct and 21 proximate result of Defendant Micron’s acts, such states paid more for DRAM than they 22 otherwise would have paid in the absence of Defendant Micron’s unlawful conduct.
